Rick, here's your original quote:

Taken completely out of context. Although it did not need to be clarified in its original context, I added this to your last observation:

Quote from: Rick G. - A day ago

Please note that I was referring only to those trills that specify an accidental. I stand by my statement.

Quote from: William Ashworth - 12 hours ago

In trills where the accidental is indicated, you are correct that the key signature and prior accidental state are irrelevant.

Glad we agree. In context, that is what I wrote. You are correct that lacking an accidental, the running accidental state needs to be considered.
